Panel 1

Establishing shot-

Nighttime, stars visibly in the sky. Faint view of a crater rushing towards land, with fire trailing behind it. The view of the crater, stars are in the background, while the land has dew on the tips of grass on the foreground.

1.SFX: shhh...

Panel 2

Medium shot, but emphasis on the crater landing-

Crater hits land and explodes; dirt and crust flying in several directions. A mixture of fire is seen, fuming off of the tail end of the crater. The fire has hues of yellow, green and red.

2.CAPTION: What happens when an morphed source of rock lands on Earth?

3.SFX: BOOOOOM!!!!

Panel 3

Over the shoulder view of scientists-silhouettes of scientists are seen, crowding around the crater from a cliff. Their backs are facing the view, while the crater is small, in background. Camera shot is from above, as it's position is below. One scientist is holding his head, the others are hunched over, bending. Floating exclamation and question marks are seen over their heads.

4.CAPTION: You tap in to the source!

Panel 1

The view shows a tight diagram of a floating pill. There are caption boxes around the pill that have lines connecting to the pill, describing the different abilities of the Boompill.

6.CAPTION: What is the Boompill? The boompill is a small vitamin comprised of trace minerals from one little space rock.

Panel 2

The background is blacked out, while there's a sketch of a normal kid and another sketch of the kid after the effects of taking the boompill. Emphasize on how "stronger" the kid seems for the "after" sketch.

7.SFX: BOOOOM!

8.CAPTION: It gives super-human abilities to the lucky guy or girl that ingests it. Super speed, super strength, super agility...it's like playing dice with the universe.

Panel 3

The background features a starry sky at night. The stars form "pictures" of pills.

9.CAPTION: BUT! The powers go away after a week. That's why, it's important to take your vitamins every week, kids.

Panel 4

Extreme Close up of TV static-

Extreme close up of what looks like a TV screen. Words are the screen. The words say "Have you taken your vitamins today?" This panel is a set-up to the next page.

NO DIALOGUE

Panel 1

Close-up-

Close up of a TV, placed on top of a milk crate. Background features teddy bears, toys, and gadgets. A boy's room. TV has static at the edges, worn out. Commercial of "BoomPill" is playing on the TV set.

Panel 2

Camera zooms out to view a silhouette of Malachi, our main character. He's sitting criss-cross on the floor, eyes fixed on the TV. He's looking ahead, while a figure stands at his doorway behind him.

10. DIALOGUE (MOM) : Malachi!

11. DIALOGUE (MALACHI) : Yes ma'am?

Panel 3

Medium shot of mom-

Medium-shot of Malachi's mom. Her arms are crossed, while she's leaning against Malachi's door to his room. She's clutching a stack of papers with notes scribbled on top.

12. DIALOGUE (MOM) : Another failing grade? Really, young man? I'm taking away your gadget privileges until these grades improve.

Panel 4

Malachi turns around, half-way displaying tenseness and alarm, with his hands up. The background is a solid yellow, as if he's freaked out.

13. DIALOGUE (MALACHI) : Ma! Just-Mr. Rodriguez's gonna let me turn in extra credit! So-my grade's gonna improve! Promise!
