(Billy is approached by the President to translate the alien's language for the World Council. Which, of course, Billy has been lying about.)

PAGE THIRTY-FOUR

PANEL 1: President talking to assistant.

PRESIDENT: This is our lucky break. Get me that kid!

PANEL 2: Assistant looking skeptical.

ASSISTANT: I think he's lying.

PANEL 3: President and assistant.

PRESIDENT: Don't be silly. No seven year old kid would lie about something this important.

PANEL 4: Assistant.

ASSISTANT: True. I've never known of a seven year old kid to lie about anything.

PANEL 5: President, triumphant.

PRESIDENT: Exactly!

PRESIDENT: You are our last hope.

BILLY: Will there be cupcakes?

PAGE THIRTY-SIX

PANEL 2: Walking up steps.

PRESIDENT: If you fail, the entire planet will be in trouble.

BILLY: Or gummy worms? I love gummy worms.

PANEL 3: President, Billy and the assistant.

PRESIDENT: My assistant thought you might be lying.

BILLY: Interesting. Did I mention that foot rubs help me hear the sonic rays?

PANEL 4: Billy lying back while assistant rubs his feet.

BILLY: Ahhhhh!

ASSISTANT: Harumpf.

PAGE THIRTY-SEVEN

PANEL 1: Map that shows route from Billy's house to the World Council.

CAPTION: At some point between home and the World Council, most kids would have told the truth.

CAPTION: Maybe here.

CAPTION: Or here.

CAPTION: Or at the very least, here.

PANEL 2: Text only.

CAPTION: NOT BILLY FIBENHEIMER

PANEL 3: President and Billy standing in front of big doors.
